

Credo

A Workshop for London Readers (and those in training) at Diocesan House
Saturday 18th March, 9.30am to 4.30pm
£5 (includes refreshments and light lunch)

The Nicene Creed is affirmed by congregations at the Eucharist throughout the church year, clearly signalling its prime importance for the Christian life. But why is the Creed so important? And how do we know what it means?

This workshop, led by Professor Andrew Walker of King's College London (and Didache – www.didache.org.uk), aims to answer these questions by creatively exploring the many dimensions of the Creed: spiritual, biblical, historical and theological. Workshop participants will be able to discuss and debate the central beliefs of the Creed and discover for themselves what it means to say 'I believe...' in the world and church of today.

Teaching and participation

- Teaching – there will be a short lecture before and after lunch.
- Storytelling – a dramatic presentation of the controversy which triggered the Council of Nicea and the debate which followed.
- Bible study – in groups we will do some detective work on specific passages in the New Testament which seem to provide evidence for the divinity of Christ and the divinity of the Spirit.

To the Revd Nick Mercer, Warden of Readers
Diocesan House, 36 Causton St, London, SW1P 4AU
020 7932 1236 nick.mercer@london.anglican.org

Name:

Telephone:

Email:

I enclose £5 (cheques made payable to London Diocesan Fund)

Credo

A Workshop for London Readers (and those in training) at Diocesan House
Saturday 18th March, 9.30am to 4.30pm
£5 (includes refreshments and light lunch)

The Nicene Creed is affirmed by congregations at the Eucharist throughout the church year, clearly signalling its prime importance for the Christian life. But why is the Creed so important? And how do we know what it means?

This workshop, led by Professor Andrew Walker of King's College London (and Didache – www.didache.org.uk), aims to answer these questions by creatively exploring the many dimensions of the Creed: spiritual, biblical, historical and theological. Workshop participants will be able to discuss and debate the central beliefs of the Creed and discover for themselves what it means to say 'I believe...' in the world and church of today.

Teaching and participation

- Teaching – there will be a short lecture before and after lunch.
- Storytelling – a dramatic presentation of the controversy which triggered the Council of Nicea and the debate which followed.
- Bible study – in groups we will do some detective work on specific passages in the New Testament which seem to provide evidence for the divinity of Christ and the divinity of the Spirit.

To the Revd Nick Mercer, Warden of Readers
Diocesan House, 36 Causton St, London, SW1P 4AU
020 7932 1236 nick.mercer@london.anglican.org

Name:

Telephone:

Email:

I enclose £5 (cheques made payable to London Diocesan Fund)