It has been a privilege to represent the Diocese of London as a member of the General Synod over the last five years, and I would count it a privilege to be elected to serve again.

Throughout my ministry, I have remained passionate about seeing the Church of England flourish as a confident, Christ-centred presence in every community. Through my work as CEO of Revitalise Trust, which supports clergy and dioceses across the country in the renewal of parish churches, and through my ministry in London churches across different traditions, I have seen both the opportunities and challenges facing our Church and am deeply committed to its future.

I am particularly passionate about raising up a new generation of leaders from every background. I sit on the Board of St Paul's Theological College and have worked closely with the Diocese of London to encourage greater diversity among ordination candidates, including through the co-sponsorship of the Peter's Stream, which supports those from underrepresented socio-economic and ethnic backgrounds. I care deeply about strengthening the pipeline of ordinands and leaders who will serve the Church in the years ahead.

I also have a heart for young people and Generation Z. As a mother of three daughters, a former Chair of Governors of a Church of England primary school, and through years of ministry among families, students and young adults, I long to see more young people come to know Jesus and find a genuine home within the Church. I believe the Church has a vital role to play in the re-evangelisation of our nation and beyond. Alongside proclaiming the gospel, we are called to serve our communities and seek the transformation of society. I co-founded Love Your Neighbour, a charity which brings together churches and organisations to tackle poverty, debt, addiction, unemployment, homelessness and loneliness.

I believe our inherited church teaching provides the strongest basis for mission and unity. As Chair of the Alliance, I am committed to working for arrangements that keep the Church together, protecting conscience and enabling people on all sides to minister with integrity before God.

Above all, I want to see a Church that is united in Christ, confident in its faith, rooted in parish ministry, and equipped to reach the generations to come.

I hope I might count on your support as you prayerfully consider your vote.

With every blessing,
